exceptional musicianship and stands as a moving tribute to his father's enduring legacy." Special thanks to our friends at Chapin Productions for partnering with us in honoring Harry Chapin and his brothers, Tom and Steve. Their rendition will always be the defining version, but some moments in music history resonate far beyond the stage.

The clips featured in our official music video offer a rare and deeply moving glimpse into Harry Chapin's final live performance of his iconic song. Filmed in August 1980, it captures an intimate and powerful moment with his brothers, Tom and Steve Chapin. Just a year later, we tragically lost Harry in a car accident—making this footage not only unforgettable but profoundly meaningful.

We share it now, with gratitude and reverence, as a celebration of his life, his legacy, and the timeless circle of music he helped create. Harry's memory lives on through his songs... and through us. As part of our tribute to Harry, Tom, and Steve Chapin, we hope a piece of him stays with you too," said Bruce Tarletsky, Executive Producer and Founder of High Mountain Breezes. When asked about the HMB PLAYERS, Bruce Tarletsky shared, "These lifelong friends, who have excelled as session and touring musicians, have accomplished so much as individuals—but when they come together... IT'S MAGIC!" He continued, "The production on these tracks is superb—crystal clear—a source of great pride for all of us who make up the HMB PLAYERS. Whenever you have the opportunity to be part of something bigger than yourself, it's truly special. That's what my experience has been with High Mountain Breezes."

About High Mountain Breezes

HMB is a collection of lifelong music friends who take time out of their professional careers to come together to reconnect, share in friendship and God-given talent to create their own style of music together. In the studio, it is a very heartfelt and spiritual experience shared among friends who love what they do as opposed to a standard studio work session.

One player expressed the spirit of HMB very eloquently when he said, "The gift of being a worthy session player is two-fold, first; using one's palette to augment something already beautiful, and second, being trusted and skilled enough to do it."

When HMB comes together as a team, members use this sentiment for the collective whole. In a way, the HMB players are leaving their own mark on music, by creating a unique legacy. When together, it is truly a collaborative effort where time stands still. Everyone from the players, the vocalist, the songwriting team and producers contribute to our songs. When you hear a High Mountain Breezes' song, you'll feel the chemistry of years of friendship paired with musical mastery achieved only through each member's legendary skillset combined.
