PLEASANTON, CA, UNITED STATES, August 19, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The futures market has long been difficult to conquer because it requires high intelligence. Institutional traders have utilized complex algorithms and high-speed systems to dominate this space for years, leaving retail traders to rely on inferior tools and expertise.

Times are changing. Retail traders can now afford automation tools that were once out of their price range.

Sniper Auto Trader, a software launched in August 2023, is at the forefront of this change, offering a synthesis of automation, education, and support to allow everyday people to trade smarter.

Futures trading has unique benefits that attract retail investors. The market is open for 6 days a week, from 6 pm EST on Sunday and closes at 5 PM EST on Fridays. It remains closed on Saturday.

It has high liquidity to enable you to open and close positions rapidly, and leverage to allow you to control higher positions with less money, although that includes increased risk.

With an automated system, you can monitor trade 24/7, and also make the exact trading moves and remove the emotional swings that often derail manual traders.

Although automation is not all you need. Without proper guidance, even the best tools can lead to confusion or misuse.

If you have ever attempted to trade, you are familiar with the difficulties. Feelings such as greed or fear can compel you to close a trade prematurely or cling to it for too long.

The perpetual need to make decisions results in mental exhaustion, and it becomes difficult to remain disciplined. Results are unpredictable without a systematic approach, and impatience prompts traders to discard methods too soon.

Monty Sandhu, Vice President at Sniper Auto Trader, is familiar with this plight. "I lost more than $20,000 in the beginning of my trading career because I traded on gut feel rather than a strategy," he recounts.

In spite of his MBA in Finance and 20 years of corporate experience, Sandhu was humbled by trading. "The market does not care about your background. It respects discipline instead.

Sniper Auto Trader CEO and co-founder Harman Dhillon concurs. A trader with more than 25 years of experience in futures, forex, and equities, Dhillon witnessed firsthand how retail traders got left behind. "The technology was there, but the support and education weren't," he explains. "We set out to change that."

Sniper Auto Trader is more than just a piece of software. The platform pairs automation with an extensive support system to set traders up for success.

Rather than one of the numerous providers that supply tools and nothing more, Sniper Auto Trader focuses on mentorship and education.

The platform incorporates step-by-step training modules, live Zoom sessions with veteran traders, one-on-one mentorship, and 24/5 technical support from actual human beings.

Our support team responds in seconds," Sandhu explains. "You're not left with a chatbot. We're here to walk you through." This human-first mentality distinguishes Sniper Auto Trader in a space that has been guilty of abandoning users to their own devices.

The site is compatible with NinjaTrader, a premier brokerage technology that is accessible in more than 140 countries. Regardless of your location, Sniper Auto Trader's automation capabilities and trade futures are readily available.

Such global reach makes sure that time zones or geographical location do not restrict you from taking part.

Automated trading solves most of the issues that afflict manual traders. Using predetermined strategies, an automation bot such as Sniper Auto Trader makes trades based on market information, not emotions.

It tracks markets in real-time, recognizes opportunities, and takes action with accuracy and speed. This cuts down screen time, limits decision fatigue, and encourages consistency.

Nonetheless, automation is not to be viewed as a way to instant financial wealth. "It is still important to understand the system," Dhillon insists. "Our goal is to teach you the logic that goes into each trade, so you won't just be following a blind algorithm."

Since its release, Sniper Auto Trader has drawn more than 2,500 active users. The system has been highlighted on NBC News and Fox News, a demonstration of its expanding impact.

The users indicate achieving confidence and consistency, owing to the system's emphasis on education and live support.

Many trading platforms promise quick profits but fail to deliver lasting results. Sniper Auto Trader takes a different side. "We're not here to sell a dream," Sandhu says.

The website's training courses simplify difficult concepts of futures trading and risk management into clear, actionable steps.

For example, new traders stand to learn how to set up automated systems according to their risk tolerance and goals. Live Zoom sessions connect you with traders who have better experience, and if you encounter any issues, one-on-one mentorship and rapid-response support are there to help.

This focus on education exposes the vision of Dhillon and Sandhu. "Trading is a skill, not a gamble," Dhillon says. "With the right tools and knowledge, anyone can learn it." By combining automation with hands-on guidance, Sniper Auto Trader empowers users to trade like professionals without needing years of experience.

Automation is changing the futures market. Software like Sniper Auto Trader is actively changing how things are being done, giving retail traders access to strategies they never imagined existed.

But to be successful, you need to put in effort, learn the market, understand your tools, and stay disciplined.

If you're considering futures trading, it's easier to start with a platform that prioritizes educating its users over gains.

Choose platforms that offer real support, look for tools that integrate globally, like Sniper Auto Trader, which works seamlessly with NinjaTrader. Most importantly, focus on building skills, not chasing quick wins.

Sniper Auto Trader aims to show trading as a learnable, sustainable skill. By offering automation, education, and support, the platform helps everyday people take control of their financial future.
