The open house highlighted the transformation of a project that had previously stalled under another builder. When the renovation was left incomplete, FineCraft stepped in to stabilize the site, correct underlying issues, and see the project through to completion. Guests at the event were able to walk through the finished living spaces and see firsthand the quality of craftsmanship and attention to detail that defined the remodel.

“

This open house was about more than showing a house. It was about showing what can be achieved when structure and communication are restored to a project.”
