Huntington Beach, CA – August 30, 2025 – Karim Hanna of Huntington Beach, founder of Valor Tax Relief, today announced a renewed focus on serving taxpayers with high-dollar, complex IRS cases — particularly those who are self-employed, asset-heavy, or already facing Revenue Officer (RO) enforcement.

Hanna explained that these cases require far more than boilerplate strategies:

“A traditional CPA will crunch numbers and set up a payment plan, but that often just funnels money into interest. At Valor, we use creative, outside-the-box strategies within IRS rules to minimize liability, leverage national standards, and give our clients the best possible outcome,” said Karim Hanna.

Valor’s approach stands apart from factory-style tax resolution firms that rely on minimum-wage case managers and cookie-cutter scripts. The firm emphasizes deep analysis, multiple perspectives, and a consultative strategy on every case. This includes evaluating every tax credit, exploring advanced options like Partial Payment Installment Agreements, and giving clients the truth about what is and isn’t possible — instead of hollow “pennies on the dollar” promises.

“Our clients deserve more than band-aids on broken legs,” Hanna added. “When you’re dealing with hundreds of thousands or even millions in tax debt, one wrong move can mean tens of thousands in penalties. We don’t guess. We don’t script. We do the work.”

Beyond high-stakes tax resolution, Hanna continues to invest in the Huntington Beach community through Valor's Air Cooled Club, a Volkswagen-themed car club that hosts events, fundraisers, and cruises. The dual focus — elite tax strategies and authentic community involvement — reflects Hanna's philosophy that success should be measured in both professional results and local impact.
