

Empowering Neurodivergent Kids Through Music That's Fun, Functional, and Full of Heart

Emmy Award-winning composers JP Rende and Kat Raio-Rende release their brand-new single Anything Else from their groundbreaking children's music project Aidee.

NEW YORK, NY, UNITED STATES, August 26, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Emmy Award-winning composers JP Rende and Kat Raio-Rende release their brand-new single Anything Else from their groundbreaking children's music project Aidee newly released. This upbeat, catchy track continues Aidee's mission to empower children with ADHD and other forms of neurodivergence through music, movement, and visual storytelling.

This single is all about celebrating neurodivergent minds and showing kids that their way of thinking is not just valid, but magical.”

Kat Raio-Rende

Anything Else is a fun, easy-to-follow song that encourages kids to pause and ask themselves, “Is there anything else I need to do or bring with me?” Aimed at tackling the common ADHD challenge of misplacing or forgetting items when distracted, the track offers an engaging musical reminder that’s as practical as it is playful.

“Music can do more than entertain, it can transform how children feel about themselves and the world around them,” says Kat Raio-Rende. “This single is all about celebrating neurodivergent minds and showing kids that their way of thinking is not just valid, but magical.”

A Mission Born at Home - The couple's journey to creating Aidee began close to home. When both of their children were diagnosed with ADHD, JP and Kat set out to create tools that would help neurodivergent kids navigate everyday challenges with confidence and joy. When a playful song they wrote inspired their daughter to put her coat away for the first time without prompting, they knew they had discovered something powerful, and Aidee was born.
