

Elizabeth Stanford Recognized by Influential Women 2025

AL, UNITED STATES, August 26, 2025

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Influential Women is proud to recognize Elizabeth Stanford, MBA, as part of its 2025 recognition as a distinguished Senior Regional Sales Manager at Galderma, where she spearheads strategic initiatives in immunology. With an extensive background in pharmaceutical and biotech sales, Elizabeth has built a career defined by leadership, mentorship, and cultivating high-performing teams. Prior to joining Galderma, she held key management roles at AbbVie and Allergan, consistently driving results across complex therapeutic areas including neurology, psychiatry, and cardiovascular health.

Elizabeth earned her Bachelor's Degree in International Marketing from the University of South Alabama and a Master of Business Administration from Liberty University. Her career journey began in business-to-business sales and evolved into a high-impact trajectory in healthcare, where she is recognized for inspiring teams, developing talent, and delivering market growth—all while leading with authenticity and professional integrity.

Elizabeth attributes her success to a combination of ambition, adaptability, and continuous learning. Pursuing her MBA provided a competitive advantage, while her early experience in sales—from copier sales to IT and healthcare consulting—helped her build credibility and refine the skills that underpin her leadership today. Elizabeth intentionally embraced each step in her career to strengthen her personal brand and open doors to new opportunities.

Reflecting on guidance that shaped her path, Elizabeth cites the best career advice she received: to embrace and share her unique story, even when it differs from others'. Her mentor encouraged her to speak about her journey, which led to invitations to share her experiences on company-wide panels, further solidifying her reputation as a leader who inspires others.

To young women entering the industry, Elizabeth advises staying authentic and true to themselves. She believes that authenticity fosters trust and leaves a lasting impression—when people know you are genuine and consistently give your best, it sets you apart in meaningful ways.

Central to Elizabeth's professional philosophy are trust, mentorship, and intuition. She focuses on building supportive team cultures, often relying on her instincts when hiring or mentoring. Her approach has yielded outstanding outcomes, demonstrating that when her team thrives, her impact—and the broader organization—thrives as well.
