10,000 Victims in 22 Years

I can't be DEAD, I'm only 17!

Americans United Against Destructive Driving (AUADD), a dedicated all-volunteer organization, announced today that it has reached a significant milestone by assisting 10,000 victims of destructive driving crashes over its 22-year history.

Our goal is zero,” said William M. Piecuch, Jr, Founder and President of AUADD. “We believe if we can continue to educate teens at the high school level using our proven educational tools..”

Since its founding, AUADD has committed itself to reducing the harmful impact of reckless driving through education and support. The organization’s flagship program, Turn On Safe Driving, has educated over 400,000 teens since 2003 using paper-based materials distributed at high schools across the country. AUADD’s ongoing mission is clear: to achieve zero destructive driving incidents.

“Our goal is zero,” said a spokesperson for AUADD. “We believe if we can continue to educate teens at the high school level using our proven educational tools, which will soon be available in an app form, we can reach upwards of one million teens a year. The app will allow us to educate teens more quickly and effectively, expanding the reach of our lifesaving message.”

The upcoming app version of Turn On Safe Driving is expected to modernize the program’s delivery and engage a larger audience through accessible, interactive content. AUADD hopes that this innovative tool will accelerate efforts to combat destructive driving and ultimately save lives by encouraging safer driving habits among young drivers.
