Survivors deserve someone who listens, who cares and who will work relentlessly to help them seek justice.”

Craig Bernhardt, lead trial attorney at Herman Law

Manhattan upgrade, in addition to a new office in Buffalo, allows Herman Law to better serve communities in New York, enhancing its impact statewide.

“We have proudly stood alongside survivors in New York for over a decade, and this expansion is a natural next step in making our services more accessible,” said Jeff Herman, founding attorney at Herman Law. “Our mission is to reach survivors across the state of New York, from Manhattan to Buffalo. We are here to break down any barriers to justice they may face.”

“Having a new office in Buffalo means survivors in Western New York now have local representation they can count on,” said Craig Bernhardt, lead trial attorney at Herman Law’s Buffalo office. “Survivors deserve someone who listens, who cares and who will work relentlessly to help them seek justice, and that’s exactly what this new office represents.”

With a long history of advocating for survivors across the country, Herman Law is known for its compassionate, survivor-first approach. The firm's attorneys are experienced in litigating against institutions such as schools, religious organizations, foster care systems and other entities that have failed to protect children and vulnerable adults.
