"We believe every Mississippi family deserves access to hope, healing, and professional support – whether they live next door in Columbus or hours away in rural communities," said Edward Yeates, LPC, Founder and Owner of Yeates Family Consulting. "Our digital portal breaks down barriers while preserving the personal connection and collaborative approach that defines our practice."

Built on a Foundation of Local Trust and Expertise

For over a decade, Yeates Family Consulting has served the Columbus community with an approach that seamlessly blends evidence-based therapeutic techniques with genuine warmth and deep local understanding. This foundation of community trust now extends statewide, bringing the practice's reputation for addressing root causes and building sustainable wellness to families throughout Mississippi.

"What sets us apart is our commitment to meeting people exactly where they are," Yeates explained. "We don't just treat symptoms – we walk alongside families on their journey toward lasting change and wholeness, whether that's in our Columbus office or through secure connections to homes across Mississippi."

Technology Enhances, Never Replaces Human Connection

While the digital platform leverages advanced telehealth technology, Yeates Family Consulting maintains its core philosophy of genuine human connection. Each client receives the same level of personalized attention, collaborative treatment planning, and ongoing support that has become the hallmark of the practice's approach.

The portal includes features for secure messaging between sessions, comprehensive educational resources, and flexible scheduling options – ensuring families feel supported throughout their healing journey, not just during appointments. For local families, the platform complements existing in-person services, while for those across the state, it provides full access to quality care.

Addressing Mississippi's Unique Mental Health Challenges

As a practice deeply rooted in Mississippi culture and community, Yeates Family Consulting understands the specific challenges facing families across the state. The enhanced service delivery model serves rural communities, working families with transportation limitations, busy schedules, and anyone seeking quality mental health care without geographic constraints.

"Mississippi families are resilient, but they shouldn't have to face life's challenges alone," said Yeates. "Our goal is to be a trusted partner in Columbus and every community across our state, helping families not just survive difficult times, but truly thrive through them."

Yeates Family Consulting's Intensive Outpatient Program serves adolescents ages 12-18 throughout Mississippi.

The practice specializes in child behavioral therapy with evidence-based interventions for ADHD, ODD, and trauma recovery.

Evidence-Based Care with Mississippi Heart

The practice maintains its commitment to evidence-based therapeutic approaches while providing the personal attention and cultural understanding that comes from being rooted in Mississippi communities. All providers are licensed, credentialed mental health professionals with specialized training in family therapy, adolescent care, and integrated treatment approaches.

From their Columbus base, the team serves families dealing with anxiety, depression, trauma, relationship challenges, behavioral issues, and life transitions – offering both the clinical expertise and genuine care that families need for lasting healing.

Strengthening Mississippi's Mental Health Infrastructure

Beyond direct patient care, Yeates Family Consulting addresses Mississippi's mental health provider shortage through a comprehensive internship program designed to develop the next generation of qualified professionals. The accredited program partners with respected institutions including Liberty University, Mississippi State University, Walden University, and other regional learning institutions.

"We recognize that expanding access to mental health services requires both innovative delivery methods and more qualified professionals," said Yeates. "Our internship program is an investment in Mississippi's future mental health infrastructure, ensuring we can continue serving communities with excellence."

A Comprehensive Approach to Healing and Growth

The launch of the digital portal, combined with the practice's full range of therapeutic services and commitment to training future professionals, represents Yeates Family Consulting's comprehensive approach to strengthening mental healthcare throughout Mississippi. Whether families need intensive outpatient support for adolescents, Christian-integrated counseling, medication management, or innovative movement therapy approaches, the practice provides accessible pathways to healing.

Family therapy sessions focus on whole-person wellness and collaborative healing for individuals, children, and families.

"This isn't about choosing between technology and human connection," Yeates emphasized. "It's about using every tool available – from evidence-based therapies to secure digital platforms – to ensure that quality, compassionate mental health care reaches every Mississippi family who needs it, while maintaining the values of dignity, respect, and genuine partnership that guide everything we do."
