"We're proud to provide a flexible training option that benefits both our students and local healthcare providers," said Kendra Bradshaw, Minneapolis Medical Assistant School Program Manager.

Students gain both classroom instruction and real-world training through onsite labs and a required externship at a partner clinic. In just a few months, they graduate with the technical and administrative skills needed to become valuable members of healthcare teams throughout the Minneapolis-St. Paul metro area.

The program's affordability is central to its mission. Students can choose from several flexible payment plans, ensuring that they graduate without the heavy burden of student debt. This model saves students significant time and cost compared to traditional programs.

Coursework includes anatomy and physiology, medical terminology, laboratory procedures, patient interaction, and clinical skills such as administering medications. Students also learn essential administrative skills, including recordkeeping, billing, coding, and front-office

“We are honored to expand into Crystal,” said Chris Lofton, CEO of Zollege. “By making training accessible and hands-on, we’re helping students build strong futures while supporting the growing demand for healthcare workers in Minnesota.”

Graduates are prepared to enter hospitals, specialty clinics, and family practices across the Twin Cities region, ready to make an impact in patient care.
