As part of its commitment to celebrating literary excellence, Reader's House proudly presented Apple with the Editor's Choice Award of Literary Excellence. This prestigious award underscores Apple's contributions to literature as a medium of empathy and connection across cultures.

Praise for Apple An's Work

The magazine commends Apple's literary contributions for their ability to illuminate cultural divides, foster understanding, and celebrate human resilience. Her memoir Las Crosses invites readers into a deeply personal journey of courage and perseverance, while Mother of Red Mountains expands horizons through a vibrant portrayal of history and motherhood within Revolutionary China.

In their rave review, Reader's House celebrated Apple's skill for "crafting immersive settings and unforgettable characters." Her narratives profoundly "dismantle stereotypes and foster understanding, one heartfelt story at a time."

Highlights from the Interview

In the interview, Apple An delves into the influences and techniques behind her creative works, offering an intimate glimpse into her artistic process:

On telling meaningful stories across cultures:

"I realised my stories could be interesting to many people who've only read limited accounts about China. Such deeply personal yet universal narratives can enrich cultural understanding and acceptance, making the world a better place."

On researching historical fiction:

"Old photos, conversations with family and friends, and thorough investigation using online tools were essential. Writing this novel was also a healing process that allowed me to appreciate my mother's resilience and bring her life and struggles to vivid reality."

On crafting immersive settings:

"When I wrote a scene, I saw it playing out before me like a movie. My goal was to ensure readers could see, hear, and experience the story as if they were right beside the characters.”

Apple An's Upcoming Work

Apple's second historical novel, Daughter of Blue City, is set for release in autumn 2025 and promises to captivate readers further by examining life during China's Cultural Revolution.

About the Author

Apple An has garnered a reputation as a literary luminary through her heartfelt storytelling. Her works shed light on the quiet strength of everyday heroes, blending academic precision with emotional depth. In addition to her novels, Apple co-edits the Voices Anthology Series, empowering aspiring writers to share their stories with the world. Her belief in mindful living and creative discipline echoes through her self-help publications, further inspiring readers to forge meaningful connections across cultural divides.
