"Our program helps students gain the skills they need to succeed, while also providing the local medical community with trained professionals ready to make a difference," said Holly Capuano, Grand Junction Medical Assistant School Program Manager.

Colorado's newest medical assistant program emphasizes accessibility, affordability, and practical experience. Students complete onsite training in a real clinic and participate in an externship where they work directly with medical professionals. The accelerated curriculum ensures graduates are career-ready in just a few months, offering a faster, more affordable alternative to traditional programs.

The program also provides flexible tuition options, helping students avoid student debt while saving thousands of dollars compared to conventional college paths. With both clinical and administrative coursework, graduates are equipped for a variety of roles in the healthcare sector.

Students gain experience in patient care, medical terminology, anatomy and physiology, administering medications, and laboratory procedures. They also receive training in administrative responsibilities such as billing, coding, and maintaining electronic health records—skills that prepare them for both the front and back office.

“It’s exciting to introduce this program to the Grand Junction community,” said Chris Lofton, CEO of Zollege. “By making education more affordable and hands-on, we’re offering students a direct pathway into a rewarding healthcare career.”

Upon completion, graduates of Grand Junction Medical Assistant School will be prepared to seek employment in hospitals, physician practices, and specialty clinics across western Colorado. Learn more about the program and how to apply here. Seats are limited.
