

Rooter Man Plumbing Reminds Charleston Why Fall Drain Cleaning Is the Key to a Stress-Free Holiday Season

Rooter Man urges Charleston home and business owners to clean drains this fall to prevent costly clogs and plumbing emergencies during the holiday season.

CHARLESTON, SC, UNITED STATES, September 3, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- With nearly 20 years of experience dealing with Charleston's drainage systems, the Lowcountry plumbing professionals at Rooter Man are reminding Charleston's homeowners and businesses that right now is the best time to prepare plumbing systems before the busy holiday season with preventative maintenance.

After weeks of heavy rains and flooding across Charleston, local drains and sewer systems are under more strain than usual. Debris, mud, and runoff can settle in pipes, adding to everyday household buildup and increasing the risk of clogs. While drains may still appear to be working, these conditions often mark the early stages of a serious blockage. With the added stress of holiday cooking, family gatherings, and overnight guests just around the corner, even a minor clog can quickly escalate into a major plumbing emergency. Preparing your drains now helps prevent costly issues later in the year.

"Drain emergencies never happen at a convenient time," said Nelson Huggins, owner of Rooter Man. "What starts as a slow drain in September can become a full backup by the time Thanksgiving or Christmas arrives. With the recent flooding adding extra debris to local systems, preventative drain cleaning is more important than ever."

Recognizing the early signs of drain trouble is crucial with upcoming holidays. Common warning
