

Tony's Fencing and Iron Works Highlights Safe Fencing Practices for Pets

Learn how Tony's Fencing and Iron Works helps families choose the perfect pet-safe fence for security, safety, and curb appeal in Southeast Louisiana.

COVINGTON, LA, UNITED STATES, September 1, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- When it comes to keeping pets safe at home, the type of fencing you choose can make all the difference. Recent trends in Southeast Louisiana highlight a growing awareness among homeowners about selecting fences that are both secure and durable, especially in the region's humid climate.

Experts note that each type of fencing—whether wood, vinyl, or iron—offers unique benefits for pet safety. Wood fences provide privacy but may require regular maintenance to prevent gaps where small pets could escape. Vinyl fencing resists rot and requires less upkeep, making it ideal for humid areas, while iron fences offer visibility and strength but may need additional barriers to keep smaller animals safely contained.

"Many pet owners don't realize that the right fence isn't just about aesthetics," says Tony Smith, owner of Tony's Fencing and Iron Works. "It's about creating a safe environment where pets can play freely without the risk of escaping or injury."

Homeowners are also advised to consider height, spacing between pickets, and gate security when planning a pet-friendly fence. In Southeast Louisiana, climate resilience is critical, as high humidity and storms can compromise weaker materials. Professional guidance can ensure that fences are both safe for pets and built to last.

“

A fence should give homeowners peace of mind knowing their pets are safe.”

FAQ

Q: What fence height is best for dogs?

Large breeds may require a 6-foot fence, while smaller dogs often do well with 4 feet, depending on their jumping ability.

Q: How do I stop my dog from digging under the fence?

Tony's can install underground barriers or base reinforcements to prevent digging.

Q: Can ornamental fences keep small pets in?

Yes — custom spacing between pickets ensures small pets like cats and toy breeds stay secure.
