About Sanjyot Dunung:

Raised in Des Plaines, Illinois, the daughter of Indian immigrants who instilled in her the values of community, citizenship, and service, Sanjyot is leading a Commonsense Movement to deliver practical solutions that work for all Americans.

With deep pride in the promise of America, Sanjyot has spent her career building things—companies, partnerships, jobs, a family, and she’s part of a proud military family. As a single mom raising three boys, growing a small business, and caring for aging and disabled parents, she has faced the same challenging realities that so many people in our communities are struggling with right now. For too many families, the American Dream feels out of reach. That’s why she’s stepping up and running for Congressional District IL 08—to fight for all Americans and ensure daily life is more affordable, safer, and healthier so that dream remains alive for generations to come.

She’s a social scientist and educator, who has served on Biden’s foreign policy working group focused on international trade and serves on the Boards of National Small Business Association and Truman Center for National Policy. Sanjyot knows firsthand what it takes to create opportunity and jobs, defend freedoms and democracy, and ensure dignity and security for all.

Sanjyot is also endorsed by ASPIRE, the Asian Congressional Caucus representing all 20 members in the House and Senate.
