The achievement comes as Butterfly Effects celebrates its 20th year of providing quality ABA therapy services to children and families nationwide. Since 2005, Butterfly Effects has partnered with families to deliver individualized care in homes, schools, and centers across the country, helping thousands of children with autism reach their fullest potential.

“Earning BHCOE accreditation in our 20th year is a milestone that validates both our history of impact and our future vision,” said Steve Woolf, PhD., BCBA-D, President of Butterfly Effects. “It reinforces for families, physicians, and payors that Butterfly Effects is committed to delivering the highest quality of care to every child we serve.”

BHCOE Accreditation is regarded as the gold standard within the ABA field. To achieve accreditation, providers undergo a comprehensive evaluation process that reviews clinical operations, staff qualifications, treatment integrity, and client outcomes. This rigorous assessment ensures that accredited organizations consistently deliver evidence-based, ethical, and effective therapy.

For families, the accreditation means greater assurance and peace of mind. "When a parent chooses Butterfly Effects, they are choosing a provider that has been independently recognized for clinical excellence and commitment to continuous improvement," said Leah Bean, MA, MS, BCBA, Director of Quality Assurance and Compliance at Butterfly Effects.

Butterfly Effects delivers ABA therapy services in homes, schools, and centers across 12 states, serving thousands of children with autism and their families each year. With an emphasis on collaboration, compassion, and clinical expertise, the organization's mission is to transform lives and empower families through individualized care.
