

Parent Liaison and Amazon Best-Selling Author Provides Interventions for Schools and Families Following Recent Tragedy

Uplifting The Pain...Now

JACKSONVILLE, FL, UNITED STATES, September 5, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In the wake of a recent Minneapolis school tragedy that has deeply affected a school community, conversations around student well-being, emotional support, and prevention are more important than ever. Gail Carter-Cade, Parent Liaison and Amazon Best-Selling author of Uplifting the Pain of Behavioral and Learning Styles Through Poetry Now, is calling attention to the urgent need for meaningful interventions that address the unseen pain many students carry.

Her book, Uplifting the Pain...Now, combines poetry and lived experience to reveal the emotional foundation behind a child's behavior. The resource equips parents, educators, and community leaders with insight to uncover pain, understand its roots, and uplift students toward healing and growth.

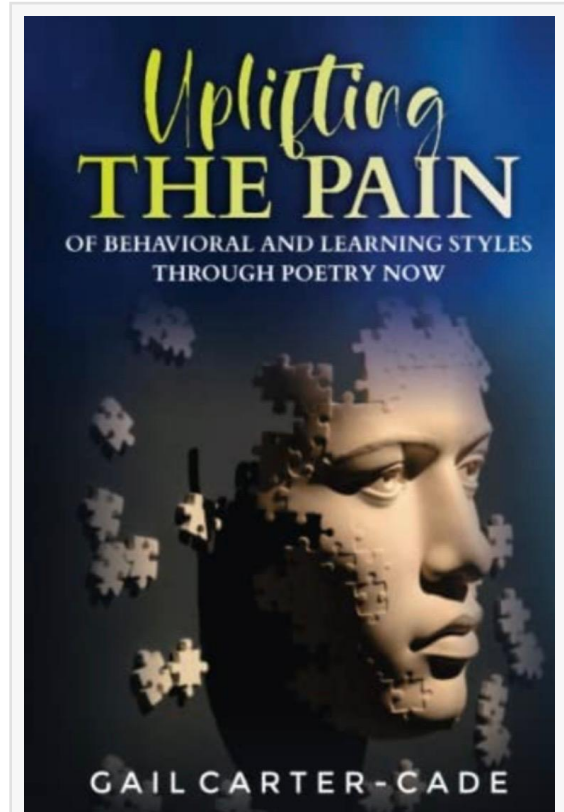

"When tragedy strikes, it's easy to look at the surface of what happened," says Gail Carter-Cade. "But to truly prevent future heartbreak, we must provide students with interventions that go deeper—interventions that uncover unspoken words, help us understand their struggles, and uplift them with support."

The Uplifting the Pain...Now, outreach created by Gail Carter-Cade focuses on advocacy, communication, and unveiling the underlying sources of student pain. As both a Parent Liaison and community advocate, she has seen firsthand how early, compassionate interventions can change the trajectory of a child's life.
