a historic Hudson Valley bed and breakfast at 174 Angola Rd in Cornwall, reports a marked rise in short-stay bookings from New York City—part of the broader shift toward “micro-cations,” quick getaways that prioritize proximity, culture, and comfort. For travelers evaluating hotels close to West Point, the inn’s location near the United States Military Academy, Storm King Art Center, and scenic Hudson River routes positions it as a convenient base for weekend trips.

Set on approximately seven acres, the property comprises two distinct historic buildings—the 1820 Manor House and the 1764 House—with a total of 13 guest rooms. Many rooms feature private baths and working fireplaces. Complimentary breakfast is served daily, and on-site parking supports easy in-and-out for art, outdoor, shopping, and USMA-focused itineraries.

“We’ve seen sustained interest in one- to three-night stays from NYC guests who want a restorative weekend with minimal transit time,” said a spokesperson for Cromwell Manor Inn. “Being minutes from West Point and Storm King, and close to trailheads and river towns, helps visitors fit more into a short visit without it feeling rushed.”

Weekend demand near West Point

Across key USMA weekends—Acceptance Day, Family/Parent events, and Graduation—lodging in the immediate area typically books far in advance. Travelers comparing hotels near West Point with smaller, historic properties often weigh walkability or drive time alongside the experiential value of a distinct setting, attentive service, and a sit-down breakfast that starts the day on schedule.

“Short trips succeed on details,” the spokesperson added. “Clear arrival logistics, reliable breakfast service, and practical guidance on event timing or local traffic patterns can make a 48-hour stay feel unhurried. Our team builds that into planning for guests coming to West Point or Storm King.”
