COLORADO SPRINGS, CO, UNITED STATES, September 10, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Colorado is famed for having a variable climate, with hot summers and frequent snowfall over the winter. In addition to the seasonal changes, temperature swings can be evident over a short period of time, with snow one day followed by sunshine the next. As one of the premier providers of patio accessories and Colorado Springs patio furniture, Western Outdoor Living shares insights on buying products best suited to a home or business where low-maintenance is a requirement.

A representative from Western Outdoor Living explained: "Whether you're getting ready for a new season, protecting your furniture during winter, or just doing regular upkeep, these simple guidelines will help you extend the life and beauty of your outdoor pieces."

Highlights include a focus on logistics, with purchase options being expanded when there is no necessity to keep the Colorado outdoor furniture or built-in barbecue grills outside year-round. When the products can be stored indoors over the colder months, there is less chance of wear and tear and exposure to snowfall and very cold temperatures.

Tips for wrought iron patio furniture, in particular, include using touch-up paint to cover chips in the finish as soon as possible. This is a way to stave off potential corrosion that could weaken the table or chairs, as well as negatively impacting the aesthetic appeal of the item. Wrought iron patio furniture is a traditional favorite across the state of Colorado.

For the maintenance of teak wooden patio furniture, when storing the furniture indoors over the colder months, the storage space should not be a heated room, as a drastic change in temperature could cause the teak to split. It is best to transport the furniture to a garden shed or a garage. If the furniture is being cleaned down prior to moving it to storage, Western Outdoor Living recommends soft soap flakes dissolved in warm water, as a power washer could damage the wood's surface.

For homeowners looking to protect their outdoor barbecue grills throughout the year, there are barbecue covers sold in many sizes to shield the metal and protect it from intense sunlight as well as inches of snow or rain.

As the seasons switch and thoughts turn to autumn and winter ahead, upkeep and maintenance options are an important consideration when making an end-of-season purchase.
