Hand cream is a premium cream for hands that helps to keep hands soft, smooth, and hydrated for a longer period. There are different variants of hand cream available in the market that includes repairing hand cream, protective hand cream, hand cream with SPF, scented hand cream, unscented hand cream, and others. The hand cream market is experiencing an exponential growth due to the rising consumer awareness of moisturizing hands after hand wash and sanitization. In addition, expansion of distribution channels, such as online stores, supermarkets, hypermarkets, specialty store, and others, has made these hand cream to be easily available to customers, thereby contributing to the hand cream market growth. Moreover, use of hand cream containing ingredients & fragrances such as fruity & gourmand, creamy & nutty, super foods, fresh notes & aromatherapy are some of the leading hand cream market trends now.

Before the COVID-19 pandemic, hand cream was considered as a luxury or premium hand care product. The need for soft hands existed before this pandemic, but was majorly among the niche segment consumers. However, now this product category is moving to the essential space. The current scenario has brought the attention of consumers toward moisturizing hands after hand washing & sanitization and to maintain hygiene. This is attributable to the fact that the washing of hands daily leaves hand rough, dry and stretched. This in turn has increased the demand for hand cream in the market during this pandemic ultimately contributing in fueling the growth of hand cream market.
