Selection to this role is a distinct honor and reflects Snellings' dedication to the legal profession and his long-standing commitment to justice for injury victims across North Texas.

I am honored to represent my peers as a Nominating Chair and proud to continue serving our clients and communities here in North Texas.”

Snellings' path to personal injury law began during a college internship with attorney Cecil “Cas” Casterline, where he witnessed firsthand the devastating impact of an 18-wheeler crash that left two young girls without their parents. That experience solidified his calling to advocate for victims of negligence.

After earning his J.D. from Baylor Law School—where he served on the Baylor Law Review, Order of the Barristers, and Inns of Court—Snellings began his career defending injury and product defect claims at a nationally respected defense firm. In 2008, he shifted his focus to representing the injured, co-founding a personal injury firm before establishing Snellings Injury Law in 2016.

For the past eight years, Snellings Law has been rooted in Frisco and expanded to serve clients throughout North Texas, with offices now in Sherman and Celina. Under Scott's leadership, the firm has built a reputation for compassionate advocacy, ensuring clients receive the medical care, support, and legal representation they deserve after life-changing injuries.

"Helping injury victims is more than just my career—it's my calling," said Snellings. "I am honored to represent my peers as a Nominating Chair and proud to continue serving our clients and communities here in North Texas."
