This all-female-fronted, purpose-driven music event unites GRAMMY®-nominated, Billboard-charting, and award-winning performers around one powerful cause: supporting women in crisis.

Already fueled by fierce determination and a deep desire to uplift women, Lia's battle with cancer ignited the spark behind this mission-driven nonprofit. Born in defiance of hardship and built on hope, generosity, and the unshakable belief that music can heal, the festival has become a heartfelt movement. This year's milestone not only marks a decade of giving—it honors a personal story of survival and serves as a testament to resilience, purpose, and the power of community.

Proudly announcing their partnership with The Philadelphia Chapter of the Recording Academy (The GRAMMYS) the Ladies Who Rock 4 A Cause, joins together with sister nonprofit REST Connection (Vickie Landis, founder), and aims to expand the reach and breadth of a shared charitable mission to continue showing up for women in crisis—one song, one story, and one act of kindness at a time.

“We're not trying to change the whole world—we're just trying to change someone's world,” says Sharon Lia, founder of Ladies Who Rock 4 A Cause. “I'm deeply grateful for the volunteers, artists, and partners who have locked hearts with me in this vision over the last ten years.
