AI is no longer optional; it is reshaping how companies operate, compete and manage risk.”

Director at Schellman

The summit combines foundational education, real-world case studies and practical exercises to provide attendees with comprehensive understanding of AI implementation, governance and operations across the complete AI lifecycle. As enterprise AI adoption accelerates with over 70% of organizations deploying AI in at least one facet, new governance frameworks and responsible AI initiatives across industries prompt organizations to take strategic action.

"AI is no longer optional; it is reshaping how companies operate, compete and manage risk," said Sully Perella, Technical Director at Schellman Compliance LLC. "This summit will cut through the hype and deliver clarity, helping organizations understand both the opportunities and obligations of AI adoption while navigating the complex compliance landscape."

Schellman was the first ANAB-accredited Certification Body for ISO 42001, the first international standard specifically designed for AI management systems. Building on this industry leadership, the summit addresses the challenge of difficult concepts, conflated terms and marketing-muddled implications that have created confusion around AI use, security concerns and implementation strategies.

The summit will guide attendees through understanding fundamental AI concepts and their business implications, identifying and assessing AI-related risks in organizational contexts, developing strategic approaches to AI implementation and business alignment, and navigating complete AI systems lifecycle and data management through practical scoping exercises.

Organizations leveraging AI strategically are achieving 20-30% faster time-to-market and significantly improved operational efficiency. Recent McKinsey research indicates that organizations with mature AI practices generate almost three times more revenue from AI initiatives than their peers, while MIT studies show that companies combining human expertise with AI decision-support systems outperform those relying on either humans or AI alone by 85%.

Leading enterprises report that AI implementations have transformed their operations, with companies like JPMorgan Chase saving 360,000 hours annually through contract analysis automation, and retailers seeing 15-25% increases in conversion rates through AI-powered personalization engines. The summit targets mid-enterprise prospects and industry professionals seeking to make informed decisions in the AI space while understanding the compliance requirements surrounding AI deployment and management.
