The 90-minute intensive training will cover Parents Forum's emotional awareness-based methodology for handling challenging conversations, with particular focus on practical application and peer learning. Participants will engage in role-playing exercises, learn de-escalation techniques, and practice the art of compassionate communication that has made Parents Forum successful for over 30 years.

I am excited to be working with Parents Forum, as I see the potential it has to help parents give their children a stronger foundation for learning and life.”

Degree Candidate*

As a member organization of the Listen First Coalition—a network of over 500 organizations working to bridge divides and build understanding—Parents Forum brings decades of experience in teaching communication skills that strengthen rather than damage relationships.

This training session welcomes anyone interested in becoming a Parents Forum volunteer, as well as community members seeking communication skills for their own families. The intimate setting allows for personalized instruction and peer support that online formats cannot provide.

All community members are welcome to attend this free training session. The Cambridge Public Library provides convenient parking and public transportation access.
