'Moving Arts | Setting Hearts Ablaze' tells the inspiring story of Moving Arts Española, a creative hub changing the lives of young people through the power of dance, music, and art. “This film is a testament to the phrase ‘Art is Medicine’ and a love letter to filmmaking as an art form,” said Zac Cornfield. “Challenged by the creativity of Moving Arts, we have created a work of art that incorporates documentary, narrative filmmaking, and music videos into one piece showcasing this life-changing program.”

These two Emmy nominations, followed by last year's win for The Food Depot, recognize not just our work but also the people and organizations that trusted us with their stories.”

Michael Campbell

Eating History explores New Mexico's rich culinary traditions and was co-produced with the Museum Foundation of New Mexico. Zac Cornfield said, “Having been born in New Mexico, I feel so lucky to have the opportunity to tell the story of my home, which spans over 22,000 years, shaped by its diverse cultures, traditions, and foods. I aimed for the audience to appreciate New Mexico's deep cultural connections to food and how that has helped shape its history, not just leave with a craving for chili.”

"Our mission is to tell stories that inspire communities," said Michael Campbell, Executive Producer and Co-Founder of DocuFilms. "These two Emmy nominations, followed by last year's win for 'Movement', about The Food Depot in Santa Fe, recognize not just our work but also the people and organizations that trusted us with their stories."

The winners of the 2025 Rocky Mountain Emmy® Awards will be announced November 8, 2025, at the Chateau Luxe, Phoenix, Arizona, and streamed live on the Rocky Mountain Emmy website [www.rockymountainemmy.org]
