Darryl Meigs, the lead trial attorney for the new division dedicated to assisting survivors of abuse

Leading this new division is Trial Attorney Darryl Meigs. An attorney in the Downtown Los Angeles office, Darryl has extensive civil litigation experience, including multiple multi-million-dollar trial verdicts. His legal expertise and compassionate approach are vital to the firm's mission in these sensitive cases. Darryl is licensed in California state courts, multiple U.S. District Courts in California, and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Darryl previously clerked for the Honorable Andre Birotte Jr. in the U.S. District Court, Central District of California, and holds a J.D. from the University of Virginia School of Law and a B.A. in Psychology from Stanford University. His background in psychology provides a unique and empathetic perspective to his legal work, ensuring clients feel heard and supported throughout the entire legal process.

The dedicated team understands that these cases require a specialized and sensitive approach. They work tirelessly to hold offenders and negligent parties accountable, seeking justice and maximum compensation for medical expenses, therapy, lost wages, and emotional distress. This expansion reflects the firm's unwavering commitment to protecting the rights of the most vulnerable members of society.

"Our new division is a testament to our commitment to a higher standard of advocacy," said Darryl Meigs. "We are here to provide not only exceptional legal expertise but also a sense of security and support for those who have been wronged.
