SEASONAL WEATHER PATTERNS IN TENNESSEE

In Nashville and the broader Southeast, severe weather can happen any month. However, certain periods see stronger seasonal patterns:

Tornadoes & Severe Thunderstorms

- Primary Season: March–May (when warm Gulf air meets cooler northern air).
- Secondary Season: Late October–November (the “fall severe weather season”).
- Tornadoes can and do occur outside these windows, including winter months.

Flash Floods

- Often accompany severe thunderstorms, especially in spring and early summer.
- Tropical systems or remnants of hurricanes in late summer to early fall can bring heavy rainfall.

Winter Storms & Ice Storms

- Most likely December–February, sometimes extending into early March.
- Though snowfall is less frequent, ice storms (freezing rain) can cause major disruptions.
