Poster Reveal Marks the Beginning of a Groundbreaking Cinematic Journey

History is being made with the announcement of The Ninth Master: Way of a Warrior, the first Sikh superhero told in Hollywood style. Shot in the UK, the film combines high-octane action, fantasy, and cultural legacy in a bold step forward for global cinema.

The newly released poster gives audiences their first glimpse of a story rooted in Sikh warrior tradition and reimagined for the superhero age.

The film stars Flex Singh, Amber Doig-Thorne, Marty Mummery, and Richard Chan, alongside a line-up of talented actors bringing this world to life. The film is created and led by Flex Singh, who serves as director, producer, writer, and also stars in the title role.

“This isn't just a superhero film — it's history in the making. We're bringing Sikh representation into the global spotlight with the kind of scale and vision usually reserved for Hollywood blockbusters,” said Flex Singh.

Reflecting on the journey, Singh added:

“I'm deeply thankful to God and to the entire team who helped bring this movie to life. After years of hard work behind the scenes and keeping the project a secret, it feels incredible to finally share this announcement. My goal has always been to bring positive Sikh representation to the global stage — to tell a story that honors our legacy while inspiring audiences everywhere.”

Beyond action and spectacle, The Ninth Master also carries underlying messages of Chardi Kala — the Sikh spirit of eternal optimism — and compassion for the vulnerable, with themes addressing helping the homeless and confronting the realities of UK gang crime woven into its narrative.

Global Streaming and Cinema Plans

Release details are currently in development, with plans for both global streaming and select cinema screenings to ensure worldwide reach.
