What to Expect

A typical visit lasts about 10 to 15 minutes. After a conductive gel is applied to the skin, a handheld applicator delivers focused acoustic waves to the area of concern. No anesthesia or numbing agents are required, and there is no recovery time. Individual care plans vary based on the area being treated.

How It May Help With Aches and Pains

StemWave is a regenerative-medicine technique that uses acoustic waves to activate the body's natural healing processes, with treatment protocols designed to increase local blood flow and help reduce inflammation. As a noninvasive option, it does not require downtime, and most people report minimal or no side effects. It may be considered as an alternative to surgery, injections, or certain medications when appropriate for a patient's condition and goals.

Key attributes

- FDA-listed device classification
- Noninvasive and drug-free approach
- Fast, efficient sessions designed for busy schedules
- Cost-conscious treatment option

Common areas of use

- Neck and back conditions
- Upper extremities (shoulder, elbow, wrist)
- Lower extremities (knee, ankle, foot)
- Soft-tissue injuries (muscles, tendons, ligaments)

Designed for Everyday Schedules

Sessions are brief (often 3 to 8 minutes) and intended to fit into busy routines. The therapy is noninvasive and drug-free, and the applicator can be used across multiple treatment regions as appropriate for the plan of care. Trim Tactics emphasizes personalized recommendations following a consultation.

Important note: StemWave therapy is not a cure-all or a replacement for medical care. Outcomes and the number of sessions recommended can vary. Trim Tactics encourages individuals to discuss risks, benefits, and alternatives with a provider during their consultation.
