EINPresswire.com/ -- Jereme Dozier,

CEO of Axios Security Group and Axios Investigations Firm, recently served as a guest instructor at the Dignitary & Executive Protection Specialist Course, hosted by Independent Security Advisors (ISA) in collaboration with the Center for Security and Antiterrorism Training (CENSECATTRA).

Classroom Training

Surveillance & counter-surveillance skills are not optional in today's threat landscape; it's essential. Our responsibility as EP professionals is to stay one step ahead of the threat.”

Axios Security Group CEO

The training, held from September 22 to 28 at the Fulton County Public Safety Center in College Park, Georgia, equips law enforcement officers, investigators, and private security professionals with advanced skills in executive protection.

Mr. Dozier led the Surveillance & Counter-Surveillance module, providing participants with practical, real-world instruction in identifying and countering hostile surveillance. The module covered:

- Understanding adversary tactics used in surveillance
- Counter-surveillance methods and effective route analysis
- Surveillance Detection Route (SDR) exercises, reinforcing situational awareness and choke-point recognition

“This module is vital for modern executive protection professionals,” said Dozier. “The ability to detect and deter surveillance is the foundation of protecting high-profile individuals. I was honored to see participants apply these techniques in the field, proving their readiness to respond to evolving threats.”

The Dignitary & Executive Protection Specialist Course is GA POST-approved and designed for federal, state, and local law enforcement, corporate security professionals, licensed private investigators, and church security teams. The 7-day, 80-hour program includes classroom instruction, practical field exercises, and capstone evaluations.

Dozier, a former U.S. Army Ranger with over a decade of service in the 75th Ranger Regiment, has built a reputation as a leading voice in executive protection and investigations. Under his leadership, Axios Security Group has become one of the nation's premier providers of security services, supporting Fortune 500 executives, government officials, and high-value clients across the United States.
