EINPresswire.com/ -- Hosted by Tim

Jones, National Affiliate Manager at Foreclosure.com, the interview features Ashley Pickens, a Memphis-based broker, licensed auctioneer, and multi-million-dollar real estate producer. Together, they unpack what buyers need to know to navigate foreclosure auctions in today's market.

Ashley, who has nearly 20 years of experience in real estate, explains how auctions work, why they're rising in 2025, and the biggest mistakes first-time buyers make. She also offers practical tips on preparation, budgeting, and due diligence, all designed to help homebuyers and investors find opportunities before properties hit the open market.

"Foreclosure auctions can be intimidating, but with preparation and the right resources, they present some of the best opportunities out there," said Pickens. "I use Foreclosure.com every day to track properties before they go to auction - and that makes all the difference."

From understanding where auctions are posted to avoiding hidden costs, such as back taxes and liens, the conversation provides a roadmap for buyers who want to compete with seasoned investors. The interview also explores the differences between in-person and online auctions, the process of financing, and why distressed properties can be a powerful tool for building wealth in a challenging housing market.
