EINPresswire.com/ -- A new era of guitar craftsmanship begins as Valkenburg USA officially launches worldwide, bringing boutique, hand-built instruments from Las Vegas to players across the globe. Founded and crafted by Master Luthier Daniel Margasa, Valkenburg USA combines one-at-a-time artistry with road-tested durability—delivering guitars and basses that rival, and often surpass, the industry's most established names.

Valkenburg USA Jeff Duncan "Scarlet" Artist Model

When you pick up a Valkenburg, it feels like it's already yours. No breaking in, no fighting it. Just pure tone and soul, ready to play.”

What makes Valkenburg different? Every artist model is more than an endorsement—it's a collaboration. Each guitarist and bassist had direct input on the design, specs, and feel of their instrument, shaping every detail from neck profile to custom finishes. These are instruments built with the artists, not just for them.

Rock Icons Speak Out

David Pastorius (Pat Travers Band – Bassist): “I wanted a bass that could groove all night and still hit like a hammer when I dig in. Valkenburg worked with me on every detail to make that happen. This thing feels alive—it's like it breathes with me.”

Scott Snyder (Great White – Bassist): “My ‘Once Bitten’ bass isn't just a design—it's mine. The 3D shark bite carved into it was my idea, and Valkenburg made it real. It's not just badass to look at,

it shakes the stage every night.”

Jeff Duncan (Armored Saint – Guitarist):
“I’ve been playing since the ’80s, and I know the difference between factory and custom. Valkenburg built this one around me—my specs, my feel, my tone. When I picked it up, it already felt broken in.”

Rowan Robertson (King Kobra, Dio – Guitarist): “I was 18 when I joined Dio, and I’ve played it all since. With Valkenburg, I got to help design exactly what I wanted—built tough, full of character, and ready for the road. That’s how you know it’s real.”

Quote from the Founder

“Every Valkenburg guitar and bass is built with the soul of a vintage classic and the fire of today’s rock ‘n’ roll,” said Daniel Margasa, Master Luthier and Founder of Valkenburg USA. “We don’t mass-produce. We collaborate with artists and players to create instruments that are truly personal—made to be played hard and lived with.”
