EINPresswire.com/ -- As schools across the U.S. continue to confront the persistent challenges of COVID learning loss, the Orton Gillingham Institute \(OGI\) is stepping forward with an expanded suite of literacy solutions for the 2025–2026 school year. Through curriculum enhancements, a free nationwide tutoring initiative, and affordable professional development, OGI is helping districts close reading gaps and build lasting student success.

Nationwide, many students remain significantly behind in reading proficiency. OGI's structured literacy training equips teachers with research-backed strategies in phonics, morphology, and vocabulary, producing measurable growth across classrooms. With a history of success in large districts such as New York City and Houston, OGI provides districts the resources to accelerate recovery. "We saw immediate gains in fluency and comprehension after implementing OGI's training. Teachers finally had the confidence and clarity to support struggling readers in ways that made an impact." – Dr. Angela Lopez, Elementary School Principal, Illinois

Expanded Curriculum for 2025–2026

This fall, OGI is expanding its curriculum to include:

- 10 additional books per reading level to strengthen differentiation.
- Enhanced phonics components with more sounds and blending practice.
- Expanded morphological and vocabulary instruction, aligned with science and social studies content areas.

At the same time, schools can take advantage of OGI's Training Sale, running from September 24 – October 3, 2025.
