

Wonder & Whoa Expands Programming with New Sensory Play Class for Toddlers

New Teeny Tiny Sensory Experience invites toddlers ages 0–2 to explore textures and play, while giving parents a stress-free way to support early development.

MISSION, KANSAS, UNITED STATES, September 29, 2025 / EINPresswire.com/ -- Wonder & Whoa, the cultural arts hub for curious kids and families, announces the launch of its newest offering: the Teeny Tiny Sensory Experience, a hands-on class designed for children ages 0–2.

“As a parent of a toddler, I know those days when you just need to get out of the house, but there are so few spaces truly designed for toddler curiosity—their need to move, to touch, to explore everything,” said Gabrielle LeVota, founder of Wonder & Whoa. “From the beginning, Wonder & Whoa has been about supporting parents by creating meaningful play for kids. Expanding our programming to include our teeny tinies felt like the natural next step.”

The Teeny Tiny Sensory Experience is a parent-and-kiddo session, giving caregivers the chance to join in the fun while leaving the cleanup behind. To make things even easier for families with siblings, Wonder & Whoa also offers a simultaneous Story & Messy Play class for ages 3–5, so everyone can enjoy age-appropriate activities at the same time.

“Sensory play is magical. Toddlers learn so much by touching, squishing, pouring, and splashing. It’s a ton of fun—until it’s over and the cleanup begins,” LeVota added. “This class creates space for all the joy and none of the stress.”
