The lockdown came with new realities of working from home, homeschooling of children, job security, and lack of physical contact with other friends and relatives, it is important to look after mental as well as physical health. During the pandemic, the closing of schools, parks, and other entertainment activities has disrupted the common man's usual lifestyle and can potentially promote distress, boredom, and confusion. Similarly, the amount of anxiety among students during the COVID-19 outbreak was positively associated with hampered daily life. Given this, many people now wanted to take wellness trips to renew their mental, spiritual, and physical wellbeing when the crisis is over. Wellness tourism offers everything that is needed for one's well-being and to keep healthy life. Wellness tourism is expected to grow at much higher speed with respect to other tourism activities, which directly impacts the global spa industry.

The salon spa segment accounted for the largest market share of around 37.3% in 2020. Increase in disposable income among the middle-income class, affordable services, and innovative marketing strategies used by salons contribute to the growth of this segment. However, the highest CAGR of 17.7% is expected to be witnessed by the medical spa segment during the forecast period. Technological advancement in medical treatments such as laser technology, dermal fillers, cellfina, ultra therapy, and others drive the demand for medical spa. Hotel spa and destination spa are anticipated to witness notable growth during the forecast period, owing to massive investments in tourism infrastructure in Asia and Middle East.

The global spa services market was dominated by Europe in 2020, owing to higher demand in Western European countries such as Germany, France, UK, and others. In addition, extensive demand arising from Eastern European countries due to rise in income of middle class customer groups has contributed significantly to the market. Moreover, Europe has greater number of established spas among other region. Asia-Pacific is the second largest region in the global spa services market owing to huge contribution by countries such as Japan and China, which are highly concentrated with mineral spa.
