Elevating Safety Practices for High-Rise Work

The High-Rise Safety 2.0 initiative formalizes Prime Window Cleaning’s safety-first approach through updated procedures, equipment standards, and verification steps designed to reduce risk in mid- and high-rise buildings. The program aligns company practices with applicable OSHA fall-protection requirements (29 CFR 1910 Subpart D) and industry best practices widely referenced by building service and window cleaning associations.

What High-Rise Safety 2.0 Includes

- Pre-Job Safety Planning: Site-specific hazard assessments, documented anchor inspections provided by building management, and equipment checklists before mobilization.
- Method Selection by Building Profile: From water-fed pole on suitable elevations to roof-based systems or suspended access where appropriate, with an emphasis on minimizing exposure.
- Equipment and System Upgrades: Preference for certified anchorages as provided by the property, redundancy in lifelines, and clearly labeled rescue kits staged on-site.
- Training and Drills: Ongoing skills training for technicians and supervisors, including fall protection refreshers and emergency response simulations.

- Documentation and Transparency: Job briefing records, photo documentation when requested, and post-service summaries for property managers.

The program is designed to work across Prime's commercial portfolio—storefronts, mid-rise offices, and complex façades—while maintaining the responsiveness residential clients expect in New York's five boroughs, Long Island, and New Jersey.

Built for NYC Properties

From day one, Prime Window Cleaning has operated with an NYC-centric toolkit—combining scheduling flexibility with specialized services that include glass restoration, light fixture cleaning, gutter cleaning, pressure washing, and bucket truck services when conditions warrant. High-Rise Safety 2.0 is a continuation of this approach: a practical framework that accommodates the realities of dense urban sites, mixed building ages, and a wide range of façade materials.

Service Coverage and Response

Prime Window Cleaning serves commercial and residential properties across Brooklyn, Manhattan, Queens, the Bronx, Staten Island, Long Island, and New Jersey. The company offers one-time cleanings, seasonal maintenance routes, and tailored scopes that coordinate with construction timelines or tenant turnover schedules.

For managers seeking recurring clarity on exterior glass care, Prime can provide simple maintenance calendars and pre-scheduled visits to keep façades consistent year-round, coordinated with weather windows.

About Prime Window Cleaning

Founded in 2002, Prime Window Cleaning offers professional window cleaning services for homes, retail establishments, and high-rise commercial properties throughout the New York City metropolitan area. Services include residential and commercial window cleaning, glass restoration, gutter cleaning, pressure washing, light fixture cleaning, and bucket truck services. Prime's High-Rise Safety 2.0 program reflects its commitment to elevating planning, equipment standards, and documentation across complex projects.
