“This groundbreaking isn't just about rebuilding a store—it's about restoring hope and strengthening the bonds that make Soperton special,” said Jeff Rogers, Store

Manager of the Soperton location and a 26-year veteran of Farmers Home Furniture. “We've been through the storm together, and now we're rising stronger, ready to serve our community for generations to come.”

The Soperton location is where Farmers Home Furniture's story began in 1949, when founder

Sherwin Glass opened the company's very first store. From those humble beginnings, the brand has grown into a network of more than 260 stores across seven states. While the hurricane completely leveled the original building, a temporary location ensured the Soperton community continued to receive the hometown service customers have trusted for more than 75 years.

Phillip Faircloth, CEO of Farmers Home Furniture, added, "Soperton is the very first location where our business started, and we are building it back better than ever. This project reflects our dedication to Soperton and the enduring legacy of our founder, Sherwin Glass."

"The Soperton Farmers Home Furniture store is your hometown store serving our neighbors with quality service and home furnishings since 1949," said Gabe Selman, President of Farmers Home Furniture.

As rebuilding begins, Farmers Home Furniture looks ahead to opening a new Soperton store that honors its legacy while meeting the needs of today's families. The project represents more than a building—it's a promise to stand with the community, celebrate its resilience, and ensure that Soperton remains the heart of the company's story for decades to come.
