EINPresswire.com/ -- Health technology pioneer DrFirst today announced the winners of its 2025 Healthiverse

Heroes Award program. Now in its fifth year, the award honors healthcare organizations for their innovative use of technology to enhance medication management workflows and improve patient outcomes.

"We are pleased to recognize these outstanding organizations for eliminating the barriers that often stand in the way of patients starting and staying on prescribed medications," said Laizer Kornwasser, CEO of DrFirst. "They have each done something remarkable. They have taken the everyday frustrations of medication management and turned them into opportunities to better serve patients. That's exactly the kind of innovation we need more of in healthcare."

The award is an extension of the company's efforts to Unite the Healthiverse, a term DrFirst coined to represent its vision for connecting healthcare stakeholders with the information they need when they need it.

Winners were selected based on multiple criteria, including forward-looking use of technology and level of impact. Nominees were judged by the DrFirst clinical team, led by its chief medical officer and other experts with backgrounds in medicine and pharmacy.
