The new bi-monthly column is devoted to covering a wide variety of topics about life, art, our common humanity, and the bonds that connect us as people.

“I am honored to be named to this important position,” said Ms. Stubis. “One of the major goals I've always strived for in my writing is to help people from different parts of the world understand our common hopes, dreams, and struggles. Serving as a columnist for Diplomatic Watch gives me a notable platform from which to further pursue this goal and I am grateful to be asked to be part of their vital work.”

“Your journey as a writer, poet, and essayist, shaped by your engagement with both Eastern and Western traditions, brings a voice of depth and clarity to contemporary writing,” said Victor Gotevbe, Diplomatic Watch’s publisher and editor-in-chief. “We are confident that your work will add richness to our publication and offer readers a perspective that is both thoughtful and enduring.”

During her career, Qin (“Ching”) Sun Stubis has penned more than 200 newspaper columns, opinion pieces, poems, and short stories, many of them inflected with the perspective gained from growing up in a poor family living in a Shanghai shantytown. Her acclaimed historical memoir, “Once Our Lives,” about four generations of Chinese women who struggle to survive war, revolution, and famine, was named a top read by Ms. Magazine, Glamour Magazine UK, Readers Favorite, and GRAND Magazine, and has won numerous literary awards. It debuted as a

In addition, "Once Our Lives" was shortlisted in the nonfiction category for a 2025 Rubery Book Award, a prestigious international award based in England that was created as the answer to the Man Booker Prize for independent publishers and authors.
