Ms. Jarrett served President Barack Obama from 2009-2016, making her the longest serving senior presidential advisor in history. "We are honored to have a woman of Valerie Jarrett's caliber appear on our stage," said Joan Toth, executive director of ChIPs Network. "As CEO of the Obama Foundation, she is overseeing the creation of a new world-class cultural and civic institution on Chicago's south side, and the Obama Foundation's programs that inspire, empower and connect people to change their world. We are thrilled she will share her wisdom and time with our attendees."

Espinel shared Toth's sentiments, noting "Ms. Jarrett is an inspirational force for women in leadership. As we look to celebrating the 20th Anniversary of ChIPs, we are honored she will join us on stage for this momentous occasion."

During her time in the White House, Ms. Jarrett oversaw the Offices of Public Engagement and Intergovernmental Affairs and chaired the White House Council on Women and Girls. She championed equality and opportunity for all Americans and worked to economically and
