

Endeavour and CoPilot Global Logistics Partner to Acquire Mallory Alexander

Plan Global Platform Build with Mallory Alexander as Foundational Operating Company

MEMPHIS, TN, UNITED STATES, October 7, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Logistics industry veterans Rich Bolte, Paul Svindland, and Carmen Gerace ("CoPilot Global Logistics Holdings, LLC" or "CoPilot"), in partnership with Endeavour, are pleased to announce the acquisition of Mallory Alexander ("Mallory" or the "Company"). Mallory has a strong legacy, built over 100 years as a trusted logistics and supply chain provider, and will be the foundational operating company for a long-term plan to build a scaled global logistics platform. CoPilot and Endeavour will work with Mallory's leadership to accelerate organic growth and pursue a disciplined program of strategic investments. “Mallory Alexander's people, culture, and operating reputation made it the right place to begin building a broader logistics platform,” said Rich Bolte, Chairman of Mallory Alexander and Co-Owner of CoPilot. “We are honored and excited to advance the legacy that the Mallory family and the Company's employees have built over multiple generations. Our approach is to invest for the long term — strengthening Mallory's operations, technology, and team while selectively acquiring like-minded operators that expand service capabilities and geographic reach. We will preserve each company's operating strengths and local leadership as we scale.

Integrating administrative functions and building a unified, customer-focused culture will be a priority and a competitive advantage.”

Key Facts

- Ownership structure: Endeavour and CoPilot completed a majority investment in Mallory

Mallory Alexander International Logistics

Alexander, with members of the Mallory family retaining an ownership share. As part of the transaction, Rich Bolte and Paul Svindland joined the Company as Chairman and CEO, respectively.

- Operational continuity: Mallory Alexander will continue to operate under its existing management, brand, and customer-facing teams.

Endeavour and CoPilot are financial partners with significant experience in the logistics space — the transaction is not a merger with a competing third-party logistics operator. The transition to the new ownership structure will be managed to avoid disruption to customers, suppliers, or government partners.

- Platform strategy: Mallory will be the cornerstone operating company as CoPilot and Endeavour pursue a combination of organic investment and targeted acquisitions to build a global logistics platform. Acquisitions will be selected for cultural and operational fit and will focus on preserving local leadership, deploying best practices, and adopting shared systems where appropriate.

- Strategic investments: Initial priorities include investments in visibility systems, workforce training, safety programs, and process improvements that strengthen service reliability and frontline capabilities.

- Employee & customer commitment: The partnership is designed to enhance resources available to employees and customers. Local management teams will continue to lead day-to-day operations and will communicate site-level plans directly with employees and customers.

Leadership perspectives

“Partnering with CoPilot and Endeavour gives us the capital and governance support we need to invest in our people and expand our capabilities,” said Carmen Gerace, President of Mallory Alexander. “This structure preserves Mallory’s leadership and culture while providing new resources to support our teams and customers.”

“Today’s partnership gives Mallory the resources to accelerate investments our teams have needed, in technology and training,” says Paul Svindland, CEO of Mallory Alexander, “while
