CHARLESTON, SC, UNITED STATES, October 8, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Dispute Resolution Data (DRD), <https://disputeresolutiondata.com/about/>, announces its enhanced collaboration with the American Arbitration Association-International Centre for Dispute Resolution® (AAA-ICDR). This evolved partnership strengthens DRD's global platform relaunched with advanced AI capabilities, providing deeper analytics on international commercial arbitration and mediation.

For over a decade, DRD and the AAA-ICDR have worked together to increase transparency and understanding in international dispute resolution. This enhanced aggregated data partnership enables DRD to integrate AAA-ICDR's extensive case data, contextualizing it within a broader global framework to deliver clearer, more relevant insights to stakeholders worldwide.

Debi Slate, CEO and Co-Founder of DRD, commented on the partnership: “Our relationship with the AAA-ICDR has always been foundational to our work. By integrating AI and new product leadership, we can now provide even more meaningful analytics to the global ADR community. We are excited to continue this journey with the AAA-ICDR as a cornerstone partner.”

The recent expansion of DRD's platform, spearheaded by John Mikkelsen, Head of Product and AI Engineering, has improved the platform's ability to extract valuable insights from aggregated data on arbitration awards and mediated settlements. These insights offer strategic value for law firms, insurers, corporate legal teams, third-party funders, and academic institutions, helping with cost and risk management, dispute resolution strategy, and clause drafting.

our extensive collection of international case data to enable stakeholders worldwide to gain a deeper understanding of the value ADR is delivering throughout the globe.”
