Trustible and Armilla AI Announce First to Market Collaboration to Deliver End-to-End AI Risk Management and Liability Coverage

In working with Armilla, we're helping our customers not only govern and assess their AI systems, but also access purpose-built insurance protection for the downstream risks of deployment.”

Gerald Kierce, CEO & Co-Founder of Trustible

As AI adoption accelerates across critical business functions, companies face growing scrutiny around the safety, compliance, and performance of their AI systems. This collaboration addresses a clear market need: a unified approach to AI risk management that spans oversight, compliance, and financial protection.

“Enterprises are looking for more than just policy alignment—they need operational tools and safety nets to manage AI risk at scale,” said Gerald Kierce, CEO & Co-Founder of Trustible. “In working with Armilla, we're helping our customers not only govern and assess their AI systems, but also access purpose-built insurance protection for the downstream risks of deployment.”

Trustible’s platform helps cross-functional teams inventory and monitor AI systems, map legal and regulatory obligations (such as the EU AI Act and NIST AI RMF), and implement automated workflows to support responsible AI development and audit readiness. Armilla complements this by providing tailored insurance coverage for AI model errors, hallucinations, regulatory violations, and other underperformance events—exposures that traditional cyber or liability policies often fail to address explicitly. Both solutions ultimately help enterprises of all sizes and industries drive responsible, accelerated AI adoption.

“Our mission at Armilla is to eliminate the friction and uncertainty that keeps AI from being safely and confidently deployed,” said Karthik Ramakrishnan, CEO and Co-founder, Armilla AI. “Partnering with Trustible enhances our ability to offer underwritten coverage that’s grounded in real governance practices, while giving enterprises an integrated solution to both manage and transfer AI risk.”

Through this alliance, enterprises benefit from a streamlined workflow for managing AI risk from development through deployment, reinforced with insurance-backed financial safeguards. In the coming weeks, Armilla and Trustible will announce how enterprise customers can take advantage of the benefits of this partnership, and can sign up to receive updates at trustible.ai/armilla.
