Empowering Second Chances Through Publishing

Cadmus Publishing stands apart as a mission-driven company providing meaningful opportunities for those transitioning back into society. By employing reentry workers—individuals reentering the workforce after incarceration—the company addresses one of the most persistent challenges faced by returning citizens: sustainable employment and reintegration.

"Every donation directly supports job training, relocation, and stability for our reentry staff," said a Cadmus Publishing spokesperson. "We believe in second chances, and we see every day how literature and employment transform lives."

Innovative Programs for Incarcerated Artists and Authors

As one of the few publishing companies serving people in prison, Cadmus Publishing offers several pioneering initiatives:

Interactive Bookstore – The only platform of its kind where readers can interact directly with incarcerated authors, creating a dynamic exchange of ideas and community support.

Hot Button Merch – A unique merchandising platform allowing authors to sell clothing and creative products tied to their works, generating income and exposure.

Music By Prisoners – An exclusive program enabling people in prison to record and share original music, bringing authentic voices and stories from behind the walls to the world.

A Call to Action

Through its publishing initiatives, Cadmus Publishing bridges the gap between incarceration and opportunity, art and advocacy. Public contributions help expand reentry employment, provide relocation assistance, and ensure continued innovation for incarcerated artists and authors.
