

Autism Advocate and Author Matthew Kenslow Reaches Over 1 Million Followers, Inspiring Students and Educators Nationwide

NEW YORK, NY, UNITED STATES, October 9, 2025

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Matthew Kenslow, an author and educator living with Autism Spectrum Disorder, has built a social media following of over one million people across Instagram, YouTube, TikTok, and Facebook while spreading his message of autism awareness, acceptance, and appreciation. Through his educational content and motivational videos, Kenslow demonstrates how individuals with disabilities can pursue their passions and achieve their goals.

Kenslow's social media platforms feature videos explaining life with Autism Spectrum Disorder, dispelling common myths about disabilities, and encouraging viewers to embrace their unique gifts. His content includes demonstrations of his special interests, teaching experiences, and practical advice for individuals with disabilities and their families.

As a substitute teacher and math tutor in Orange County, California, Kenslow has earned recognition from students and staff who frequently refer to him as the "best sub." He rewards students with sleight-of-hand tricks and juggling performances while helping them excel academically, particularly in mathematics. Kenslow holds a single subject teaching credential in mathematics earned in 2023 and a Master of Arts degree in Education obtained in 2024.

Through his volunteer assembly program, Kenslow has spoken to over 12,000 students throughout Orange County, using juggling, magic tricks, and science demonstrations as teaching tools to convey messages about perseverance, emotional expression, and understanding disabilities. These presentations have generated numerous testimonials from students, educators, and parents who report that his assemblies have changed lives, brought hope, and helped students understand the true meaning of autism and inclusion.
