

Camille Thomas: Miss Universe Curaçao 2025 Launches Global Emotional Well-Being Initiative

Miss Universe Curaçao 2025 advocates for emotional abuse recognition and mental health protection through The Emotional Well Being and Protection Act

WILLEMSTAD, CURACAO, NETHERLANDS ANTILLES, October 14, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Miss Universe Curaçao 2025, Camille Thomas, is stepping onto the world stage with a purpose that reaches beyond beauty. Through her initiative, The Emotional Wellbeing and Protection Act, Camille is leading a movement to recognize emotional abuse as a real and damaging form of violence, while promoting emotional wellbeing as a fundamental human right.

For Camille, this cause is the reason she entered Miss Universe. She wants to use her voice and platform to represent not just her country, but every person who has endured pain in silence.

We protect people from physical harm, but often forget the pain that breaks the heart and mind. I want to give those people a voice, protection, and hope.”

Camille says. “I want to bring awareness to emotional abuse and make compassion part of how we protect one another.”

The initiative seeks to create lasting awareness and change through both advocacy and education. It encourages schools, workplaces, and communities to teach emotional intelligence and recognize psychological harm as a threat to human dignity. Supporters can visit www.emotionalwellbeingprotectionact.org to learn more, sign the petition, and contribute to ongoing emotional education programs.

A Purpose that Defines Her Reign

Camille believes true leadership begins with empathy. Her movement is grounded in the belief that emotional health shapes every aspect of life, from how people connect to how they heal.

"If we can teach people to understand emotions early in life, we can prevent generations of pain," she says. "This is the real mission behind my reign."

Alongside her initiative, Camille is also raising funds for The Child First Foundation, an after-school academy in Curaçao that helps children build emotional strength, self-worth, and communication skills. The foundation serves more than 150 children and continues to expand with support from Camille's Beyond The Crown Initiative.

Her goal is to ensure the foundation's future so that every child in Curaçao has access to emotional care and learning, regardless of background.

Curaçao: The Island That Inspired Her

Camille was born and raised in Curaçao, a small but vibrant island in the southern Caribbean known for its 38 beaches, bright colors, and multilingual culture. Its people are warm, diverse, and united by a spirit of community that shaped Camille's character and passion.

"Curaçao taught me to care for others," she says. "We may be a small island, but our hearts are enormous. Wherever I go, I carry that love and strength with me."

Representing her island is more than an honor. It is a responsibility. For Camille, Curaçao's values of empathy and resilience are the foundation of her message to the world.

A Journey of Purpose to Thailand

In November, Camille will travel to Bangkok, Thailand, for the 74th Miss Universe 2025 pageant. While most contestants prepare for the stage, Camille is preparing for conversations that matter. She plans to meet with educators, youth advocates, and organizations to promote emotional health as part of global wellness.

"Thailand is called the Land of Smiles," she says. "But behind every smile in every culture, there are stories of hurt and healing. I want to help bring those stories to light."

Her initiative has already gained attention for its sincerity and impact. Supporters see in Camille not only a beauty queen but a compassionate leader who is turning her platform into a tool for real change.

A Call to Protect Emotional Health

Camille's message extends to all who have faced invisible battles. Her advocacy confronts emotional harm in relationships, schools, workplaces, and online spaces. She believes society must acknowledge the lasting impact of words, manipulation, and neglect, and create systems that protect against them.

“We have learned how to treat broken bones,” she says. “Now we must learn how to heal broken hearts.”

The Emotional Wellbeing and Protection Act aims to do just that, by uniting policy and awareness to redefine how emotional pain is treated in everyday life. Through education and collective empathy, Camille hopes to create a global shift toward understanding that emotional safety is as essential as physical safety.

Join the Movement

Camille Thomas represents more than a title. She embodies a new generation of leaders who believe empathy is strength. As she prepares for Miss Universe 2025, she invites everyone to stand beside her in supporting emotional well-being for all.

Through her website, supporters can sign the petition, donate, and learn how to implement emotional literacy in their own communities. Every signature and contribution helps expand the movement and brings Camille closer to her goal of building a world where kindness and protection reach every person.

“My dream is simple,” Camille says. “To make emotional care part of human rights. If even one person feels seen or safe because of this mission, then every moment of this journey has been worth it.”

Camille’s story, from Curaçao’s shores to the Miss Universe stage in Thailand, is not about a crown. It is about courage, compassion, and creating a legacy of healing that will outlast any title.

Curaçao itself is truly the jewel of the southern Caribbean, renowned for its breathtaking beaches and vibrant culture. With 38 sun-kissed stretches of sand, from the crystal-clear waters of Playa Kenepa to the colorful coves of Cas Abao, the island offers unparalleled beauty and relaxation. What truly sets Curaçao apart is its blend of Dutch heritage, Afro-Caribbean roots, and multilingual community—where people speak Dutch, English, Papiamentu, and Spanish with ease. Whether you’re exploring secluded bays, lively beach clubs, or the pastel-hued architecture of Willemstad, Curaçao’s warmth, diversity, and welcoming spirit make every visit unforgettable.
