These updates to ADA Title II and WCAG 2.1 AA standards, which take effect in April 2026, represent an important step toward equitable access for students who require accommodations. Yet, they also present significant scalability, budgeting, and quality challenges for higher-education institutions striving to meet compliance at scale.

We’ve combined our long-standing experience in education accessibility with recent advancements in AI technology to overcome the scale challenges Title II compliance presents, without sacrificing quality.”

Nick Ruiz, Senior Product Manager for AI and Education at Verbit

Since these changes were first announced, Verbit has been working closely with its education partners to prepare institutions for a smooth transition—bringing together its deep accessibility expertise and technological innovation to address the practical realities of campus-wide implementation.

“Title II’s amendments are a welcome advancement for students who depend on accessible content, but they also introduce a new level of operational and financial complexity for universities,” said Nick Ruiz, Senior Product Manager for AI and Education at Verbit. “At Verbit, we’ve been preparing for these changes from the moment they were announced. We've combined our long-standing experience in education accessibility with recent advancements in AI technology to overcome the scale challenges Title II compliance presents, without sacrificing quality. Campus Complete was designed precisely for this moment."

The flat-rate subscription model offers budget certainty, unlimited access and the flexibility to support every department - from classrooms to public-facing content.
