“Our community is coming together to stand up — peacefully and visibly — against authoritarian power grabs,” said Michelle Fowle, co-founder and co-chair of Cambridge Indivisible. “We’re sending a message that democracy belongs to the people. America has no kings, and we refuse to be ruled by one.”

“We’ve seen what happens when people stay silent — power consolidates and freedoms erode,” said Andy Fowle, co-founder and co-chair of Cambridge Indivisible. “This movement is about visibility, unity, and courage. We’re standing shoulder to shoulder to say no to tyranny and yes to a government of, by, and for the people.”

On June 14, more than five million people across all 50 states joined No Kings in the largest single-day protest yet against President Trump's authoritarianism. The October 18 day of action marks the next step in this growing movement, channeling that same energy into another nationwide display of unity and peaceful resistance.

Cambridge Indivisible is proud to join with national partners including the ACLU, American Federation of Teachers, Common Defense, Human Rights Campaign, Indivisible, League of Conservation Voters, MoveOn, National Nurses United, Public Citizen, SEIU, and others.
