RedBee, enables these institutions to better understand their customers and identify cross-selling opportunities for revenue growth.

ABA's Partner Network provides member banks with an ecosystem of certified, trusted technological service providers to meet their various operational needs. Its network is comprised of multiple premier partners, including firms like Nasdaq, with TurmaFinTech being the latest name to enter the fold.

By joining the Network, ABA member banks can efficiently connect with the team at TurmaFinTech to solve any churn issues, futureproof their operations, and bring modern, data-driven experiences to their customers. For Adam Turmakhan, the startup's CEO, the move marks an "exciting milestone" – one that will allow them to support more banks in digitalizing for the future.

Adam Turmakhan, CEO at TurmaFinTech, said: "We're delighted to have joined the ABA Partner Network. This is an exciting milestone for TurmaFinTech, and proof of our commitment to helping US community banks and credit unions strengthen their customer relationships and better compete in an increasingly digital banking landscape.

"The ABA Partner Network is home to an exceptional collection of providers, and this is truly a fantastic moment for all of us at TurmaFinTech as we move a step closer to achieving our mission. We look forward to connecting with everyone in the Network over the coming months."
