The two races in Dubai will be held on Saturday, January 31 and Sunday, February 1.

The final round will take place at the Yas Marina Circuit a week later, Saturday, February 7 and Sunday, February 8.

Medler will be supported by Kessel Racing and D Racing.

Medler had a great 2025 season winning races in the Ferrari Challenge Trofeo Pirelli North America and Europe championships, with his recent win in Monza being the most notable.

Medler is currently in Mugello, Italy, preparing for the Ferrari Finali Mondiali where he is one of the favorites to take the win in the world final.

Medler commented, "I am looking forward to racing in the Asian Le Mans series. We have done a lot of work this year preparing for this series and I believe we will be very competitive."
